National Right to Life Endorses Alabama Congressman Barry Moore for U.S. Senate

WASHINGTON — National Right to Life, the nation's oldest and largest pro-life organization, today announced its endorsement of Alabama Congressman Barry Moore for election to the United States Senate.

"Barry Moore has demonstrated a steadfast commitment to protecting innocent human life and advancing policies that respect the dignity of every member of the human family," said Carol Tobias, president of National Right to Life. "His record reflects both conviction and compassion, and we are proud to endorse him for the United States Senate."

Throughout his public service, Moore has consistently supported policies that protect unborn children and their mothers while defending vulnerable Americans, including the elderly and persons with disabilities.

The endorsement comes at a pivotal time for the pro-life movement. Since the Supreme Court's decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, Congress has assumed an increasingly important role in shaping policies that affect the protection of human life, including debates over taxpayer funding of abortion and other federal life-related issues.

"With critical debates ahead in Washington, Barry Moore's voice will be an important one in the fight to build a culture that values and protects every human life," Tobias added. "We look forward to working alongside him to advance policies that support mothers, protect unborn children, and uphold the dignity of all people."

Founded in 1968, the National Right to Life Committee (NRLC), the federation of affiliates in each of the 50 states, is the nation's oldest and largest grassroots pro-life organization. National Right to Life works through legislation and education to protect innocent human life from abortion, infanticide, assisted suicide, and euthanasia.
